The Vaccination Acts.—The solicitor to the Gorey Guardians has informed them that 100 summonase have been served on alleged vaccination defaulters, of whom there are over 1,000 in the union.

Befence of the Realm Act.—A young man, named Michael Lee Cowman, has been remanded on basil at Gorey on the charge, under the Defence of the Realm Act, of having assaulted Private Murphy, A.S.C.

King's County County County Council held yeaterday, Mr. John Dooly, J.P., Birr, the outgoing Chairman, was re-elected, defeating Mr. E. J. Graham, M.P., by 13 votes to nine. Mr. J. Perry Geodbedy, D.L., was unanimously re-elected Vice-Chairman.

Drunk at the Age of 17.—"She was so drunk," said the Head Constable, "that we had to keep two men up with her all night in the barracks," when Alice McCormack was charged at Athlone Petty Sessions with drunkenness. She was only seventeen years of age. The case was adjourned for three months.

The Price of an Artificial Leg.—The Local Government Board wrote to the Castlerea Board of Guardians that the proposed expenditure by the Guardians of 210 out of the rates on an artificial limb, for a man named Peter McDonnell, was too high. They were of opinion that an ordinary plain leg should be sufficient for an angricultural labourer.

Servant's Claim for Maintenance.—Judge Drummond dismissed, at Athlone yesterday, a procass for maintenance brought by the Guardians of the poor against William Stewart, in respect of his domestic servant. She was injured by being burned, and had to go to hospital, and did not resume her service on leaving. His Honour held that she was not in the defendant's employment when she went to the hospital, and had been paid 10s. a week under the Westersey Compensation Act.

Potato Sprayers.—At a meeting of the Executive of the Food Production Committee of the County Donegal yesterday a letter was received from the Department declining to approve of the proposal of the Committee to purchase fifty knapsack sprayers and re-sell them at less than cost price. The Committee peinted out the urgency of providing sprayers, which most of the Donegal small holders could not buy, but which were necessary to prevent starvation; and added they would hold the Department responsible for the consequences of their failure to comply with the Committee's proposals. R.I.A.M. STUDENTS' MUSICAL UNION.

A red-letter event in the local musical circles is the concert of the R.I.A.M.
Students' Musical Union. Last year the rebellion prevented it's being beld, but this year the function fully maintained its traditional excellence. It was by no means an ordinary affair, in which item follows item in merely pleasing routine, for more than one of the compositions is ast night produced that thrill which along makes the hearing of music worth while. Diversity in the programme renders it impossible to say that one item surpassed another, for each represented a particular phase of music; but the pulse was probably most quickly stirred by the means of procuring the surply of fat cattle hust was probably most quickly stirred by the means of the composition of the work as Sir Chas. Stanford's "Songs of the Fleet." The S.M.I. choir was assisted by some male members of the Æloian Glee Singers, so that, with the orchestra, the body of performers numbered about seventy. Though Mr. T. H. Wasving, the conductor, did not rely merely on numbers to secure a striking and inspiring acties of contrasts in portarying the wonderful music pictures of moods of the sea, the fact that such resources were at his command was all to the good, and made the performance a memorable one. Such a combit, while chorus and orchestra must be warmly congratulated on their achievements; thanks and praise are due also to Mr. Percy Whitehead, who, at a day's notice, undertook the as made so much his own, but the delightful qualities of his voice found adequate exposition at all ervients in the concluding song. "Farewell," Another very important item was Glear well. Another very important item was Glear well. Another very important item was Glear well. Another very important item was clear to the supplies of the scenario secured for it graphic and expressive treatment. Miss Annie Lord was at the piano, and carried out the important and promisent work entrusted to her with excellent to promisent work entrusted to her with excellent to promisent work entrusted Withelmina.

THE GOVERNMENT AND THE IRISH CATTLE TRADE.

It has been intimated by the Government that they will require for the feeding of the Army and Navy about 100,000 fat cattle from Ireland in the period between the 1st of August and the end of the year. This will make a big demand upon cattle breeders, and may seriously affect the whole of the cattle trade. In view of the possible gravity of the situation representatives of the Cattle Trade Associations, in different parts of the country, had a prolonged interview on Monday with Mr. T. P. Gill at the Department of Agriculture. Every phase of the business was discussed. In the first instance, the Department econsulted the cattle trade of Ireland as to the best means of procuring the supply of fat cattle Industrial Unrest. Two inferences are permissible from Mr. Lloyd George's statement yesterday to the peatedly that the value of the Commissions' reports would consist vary largely in the speed with which they were presented, be—if it is not at this moment—nnand he suggested that they ought to be presented as early as the first week in July. Strong as the personnel of the Commissions is, such a period is scanty enough for the adequate discharge of what the Prime Minister described as their "very difficult and very onerous task." The Government wishes the inquiry to be at once thorough and impartial. It wants to know what the real truth is about the causes of unrest, because until they are authoritatively known it cannot take steps to redress them. Mr. Lloyd George indicated some of the causes which he believes to be operating in impairing the efficiency of the industrial machine. Of these one of the most potent is undoubtedly the high cost of living and the suspicion of the workers that it is largely due, not to normal economic processes, but to "profiteering." In this connection the Prime Minister made an important announcement. The Government has started a very searching investigation into the question, and hopes in a very short time to put forward proposals which will have the effect of reducing very substantially The effect of reducing very substantially the cost of some of the necessaries of life to the people. There are others equally important.

As the industrial machine is driven ever at higher pressure, opportunities of friction in its working accumulate. Mr. Lloyd George went nearer the heart of the trouble when he laid stress upon the danger of regarding purely as a machine what is in fact an aggregation of men of flesh and blood—

The aggregation men suffering from over-strain, fatigue, exhaustion, and consequently irritable. The chief defect of the Government's relations with labour is the fact that they are mechanical. There is a bewildering multiplicity of official departments dealing with labour matters—the Ministry of Munitions, the Admiralty, the Board of Trade, the Home Office, the Ministry of Labour, and the National Service Department-which leads to constant confusions, misunderstandings, and conflicts of policy. Too many of them have acquired the departmental habit of authority, and have pushed the restraints on liberty to which community must submit in time of war far beyond the point which organised This means that the demand, as a result labour regards as necessary. The Prime Minister admitted that "the murmurings and grumblings do not come merely from men who, for political or other reasons, are interested in promoting disquiet; they come from men who are honestly anxious to help the country along in the prosecu-tion of the war." The Government's problem is to restore confidence between tself and labour. Here, however, a new difficulty arises. Very early in their investigations, if those investigations are as thorough as the Government desires, the Commissioners will stumble on the fact, which the recent engineers' strike first exposed, that the recognised leaders of trade unionism have ceased to lead and are becoming increasingly unrepresentative of the rank and file of organised labour. The labour movement in Great Britain, as elsewhere in Europe, is in rapid process of development. It is tending more and more to substitute for the old trade unionism a new conception of great industrial guilds, together with, as a corollary to that consolidation and centralisation, a large measure of workshop The labour movement in Great Britain, tralisation, a large measure of workshop autonomy. This is the root of the problem with which the Commissioners have to deal. The Government must try to get sint occurrence with this new more transfer of the shortage of cats, without reference to any question of policy?

of order by the threat of starvation through a strict blockade of Greek ports, but the ripening of the Thessalian harvest promised to relieve him of that discipline. These crops, which he was preparing to reap, would have made him and his progerman Army independent of imported supplies for many months to come. The Allies have committed many blunders in Greece, but King Constantine now finds that he has presumed too far on their tolerance or stupidity. M. Jonnart, formerly Governor-General of Algeria, has arrived in Greece as "High Commissioner of the Protecting Powers." At the same time the French Minister at Athens has gone on leave of absence, and it is expected there that the British and Russian Ministers also will leave the city. The welcome deduction is that the Allied Governments have at last decided that the only solution of the Greek question is a military one. In the House of Commons of order by the threat of starvation only solution of the Greek question is a military one. In the House of Commons yesterday Lord Robert Cecil stated that M. Jonnart has been instructed to secure two things—"unity of Allied diplomacy" and control of the Thessalian harvest. The latter, at any rate, is an urgent necessity, and we may believe that henceforward things will move swiftly in Greece. Three courses are open to King Constantine. He can give prompt obedience to the High Commissioner's demands; he can resign the office which he has so long and so persistently abused; or he can offer armed esistance and threaten our forces at Salonika by pouring his troops from the Peloponnese into Thessaly. We must suppose that the Allies are perfectly prepared for this last emergency: it is reported that already French troops have landed at Corinth. General Dousmanis and other supporters of the pro-German régime threaten resistance, but it is improbable members of the Commissions on Indus- that they will have the courage or folly trial Unrest which are to conduct simul- to attempt it. That is very plain talk, and it comes from a man whose growing power in Greece proves that, sooner or later, he will be able to enforce it. Mr. Pennefather's curiosity on the subject of the coming potato crop excited some amusement, for Captain Bathurst, who was answering for the Board of Agriculture, stoutly refused to commit himself to the rôle of prophet on so problematical a subject. While admitting that potatoes could be put to many uses, he confessed ignorance as to the possibility of turning them into cement or rubber substitutes.

A little breeze arose between certain British members and the Chief Secretary over the continuance of racing in Ireland. The Prime Minister was quoted as having stated that it was to be stopped altogether. Mr. Faber roundly accused Mr. Duke of being afraid of the Irish members, and Mr. Pringle asked whether the House was to understand that a Minister was not bound by a statement made from the

Mr. FABER—Has not the statement been autonomy. This is the root of the problem with which the Commissioners have to deal. The Government must try to get into contact with this new movement, to establish relations with its responsible leaders, and to ensure with their co-operation that irresponsible agitators shall not seek to advance their policy by revolutionary methods.

The movement has been brought about by the stoppage of racing in Great Britain, and it is felt that, if there had been in the House a strongly organised body of opinion favourable to sport, the Government would have hesi-tated long before ordering that stoppage. Following these conversations, the Greek Government had a communiqué publicly placarded, in which it was explained that the Powers had no intention of assailing the rights of Greece or in which it was explained that the Powers had no intention of assailing the rights of Greece or her constitutional régime, and only desired Greece to remain strong and independent. Austrian Official.—The attack which had been expected for some time of the Sixth Italian Army on the Sette Communi Plateau and the Sugana Valley has begun. After careful artillery preparation, lasting several days, the cuemy yesterday threw their infantry into the fight on the front between Asiago and Brenta River, north-west of Asiago.

The Italians succeeded after great sacrifices in penetrating into our trenches. In the svening the enemy was completely ejected.

The fighting was especially obstinate near Casara Zebio, and in the region of Monteforno, where the assault was shattered by the bravery

According to reports received yesterday in London, eavys The Times, King Constantine is about to abdicate, if he has not already abdicated, in favour of his second son, Prince Alexander, who was born in 1833. It is believed that this solution of the Greek Royalist difficulty would be acceptable to the High Commissioner, M. Jonnart. In well-informed Greek circles in London it is stated that the Isthmus of Corinth has been occupied by Allied troops without opposition from the Greek Royalist forces.

Dr. McHugh, Roman Catholic Bishop of Londonderry, in a letter which he issued last night, says—England makes no secret of the fact that this new and special effort on her part to compose Irish difficulties is due, not to any concern she has for our unfortunate country, but to the requirements of the war, and especially to the necessity that is incumbent on her of convincing America and the Colonies that she has satisfed Ireland's demands. And what a strange and impolitic way England has taken to effect her object! When the Government, with the connivance and at the suggestion of those who should have protected our interests, failed to impose on Ireland a regime and a condition of things abhorrent to Irish sentiment and opposed to Irish ideas, the Prime Minister declared with a great flourish, designed, no doubt, to impress the outside world, that England would leave the solution of the question to Ireland herself. What was the object in making such statements? Was it to impress the nations with the idea of England's generosity towards Ireland, or was it to throw on Ireland the responsibility and blame for her distracted condition? How has England carried out her promise of entrusting to Ireland the arrangement of her own affairs and the establishment of a Constitution in accordance with the wishes of the people. The method adopted to give free and untrammeted expression to Irish sentiment is by appointing what is in effect a Parliamentarf Committee, and nominating a body of men who, it is expected, will carry out the wishes of the Government, regardless of what the mere Irish may think. The game that is being played, the parties engaged, and the stakes on the table can be a secret only to those who would close their eyes to current events. It may be asked why has education no representation on the Convention. Are their rights and their interests of less importance in the people on a great national issue? I am sure they are all honourable men, and men of integrity, but they have got no DR. M'HUGH'S OBJECTIONS. Dr. McHugh, Roman Catholic Bishop of Lon-

Lord HUGH CECIL said that the advantages balance any small inconveniences it might produce. He could not understand any democrat defending the present system, which, instead of representing, grossly misrepresented the people. Without Proportional Representation the whole system of representation was false and invalid. Proportional Representation would result in a very much larger number of safe seats, because once the strength of parties was ascertained in a locality, there would be less inducements to have contests. When they were making this great experiment it was proposed to strike out from the recommendations of the Speaker's Conference the only important thing in them which would operate as a great check on extravagant revolutionary tendencies, namely—Proportional Representation. That was a very dangerous thing to do.

The amendment of Major Newman was, by leave, withdrawn.

A CONCRETE CASE.

Mr. POLLOCK pointed out that the system of proportional representation had been tried for the purposes of the School Board elections in London, and had failed, because it prevented the majority from returning representatives in proportion to their full strength, and gave an unfair advantage to cliques. The difficulties were very serious, and he believed that the supporters of the proposal, in trying very problematical methods to make the House a better mirror of the thoughts of the country, were doomed to disappointment.

Mr. J. M. ROBERTSON said he considered that if this recommendation of the Conference was to be set aside, there was no reason why any weight should be attached to any of the other recommendations. He claimed that the system of proportional representation had made for stability in the countries where it had been tried.

Sir GEORGE CAVE said that the Government desired to leave the question; but he thought that the House and as Minister in charge of the bill he would not express his personal views upon the question; but he hought that the House might come to a conclusion on the mailer without further delay.

Mr. BYRE asked the President of the Board of Trade if he is aware that, owing to the failure of the Board of Trade if he is aware that, owing to the failure of the House held before Sir Richard Lodge at the Shelbourne Hotel, Dublin, on 26th March, the Amalgamated Society of Engineers, employed on the various solution, on 26th March, the Amalgamated Society of Engineers of the hought had a week's notice to be ballet vote, to hand in a week's notice to the terminate their agreement on next Monday, if, in the meantime, the inaction of which they complain is not remedied; if he is aware that the arbitration was in reference to a claim made by the engineers for an increase of wages, and that the Excutive Council approved of the vote by ballot being taken; that the resolution reached creates an acute position on the Irish railways, for it affects between So and 400; that the Excutive Council appro

THE PRICE OF SALMON.

THE PRICE OF SALMON.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE IRISH TIMES.

Sin,—Referring to the correspondence in the Press in connection with the price of salmon in Dublin, I fear the issue has become involved by statements which may not be understood except by those conversant with the subject. The point is the price at which salmon was sold in the wholesale market last month. This, I state, was from 1s. 4d. to 1s. 5d. per lb.; resold by the retailers at from 2s. 9d. to 3d., thus securing a profit of nearly 100 per cent. Is that profit excessive, and, if so, how does it affect the fishing industry and the public? I contend that it is excessive, that it does seriously injure that industry by charging a retail price that prohibits the purchase except by those who can afford to pay such rates, and debars those with limited means from buying what at a reasonable price would be cheap food. In this way it limits the market and reacts against the fishery proprietors, and, in this district, against the fishermen of Ringsend, who do not realise a fair price for their fish. The statement that only inferior fish can be bought for 1s. 4d. is not true. All fish which were caught in large quantities in Ringsend and sold in the Dublin markets last month were in perfect condition, and, so far as my fishery at Salmon Pool is concerned. I do not get six inferior fish in the entire season, and the same remark applies to most fisheries. As to the alleged toes on the weight of head of fish not charged for, it would not amount to git, per lb. on the wholesale price.

The statements appearing in the Press to furtify such excessive profits are illusory, as anyone conversant with the subject knows per-

RUSSIAN BONDS DEPRESSED. HOME RAILS IMPROVE.

In the Home Railks improve.

In the Home Railway market small gains were in a majority on balance, though there were no signs of sustained activity. Scotch Stocks were spottily better. AMERICANS FIRMER.

Americans were on the firm side, despite the fact that there was hardly any business to test values. Denver Pref. established a net gain of a dollar at 23, but Southern Common fell back it to 29i. CANADIANS AND MEXICANS STEADY. Canadian Pacifics, after being easier, closed unchanged at 177. Grand Trunk Stocks worked forward ½ to 1 in places. Mexican Railway Pref. further advanced ½, and Argentine Rails occasionally worked forward to that extent, Buenos Ayres Great Southern being specially good at 78. San Paulos improved a point to 182½.

Among Miscellaneous and Industrial Securities, Marconis maintained a net gain after being higher, and the Pref. was higher. The American Shares, however, fell 6d. Armaments were irregular, and sometimes lower. Otis Steels drooped to 165. There was a jump of 1/6 to 16/- in Fraser and Chainers National Explosives rose 1/- to 32/6, but Kynochs eased to 12, despite the 10 per cent. Nobels made a fairly firm finish at 61/6, after some fluctuation. Curtis and Harvey were around 41/- Liptons, in the Supply group, were brisk, but without net change after yesterday's meeting. It and C. 6 per cent. Pref. rose † to 4½, but British and Argentine Meas fell 6d, to 20/6. Parent Tyre Def. was active but fell to 33/9 at the close. The Ord. moved between 29/- and 29/-. Dunlop Rubber finished quietly at 67/6. Banks were spottly firmer. In the Shipping group, Court Line rallied to 33/-, but Prince Line was slow around 88/- Furness Withys and Cunards were both brisk at previous levels.

MINING MARKET DULL.

Business among Mines was not on a large scale. Kaffirs were hesitating, and several Far Eastern Market Mar INDUSTRIALS STEADY.

by alternoon. There was, however, moderate support for Diamond apecialities, and Rhodesians were dull. Among Westralians no settled tendency was noticeable, but Russians remained rather heavy. Base motal descriptions showed no pronounced tendency either way. No change was registered in quotations for copper and tin metals.

RUBBER SHARES LOWER.

The price of rubber was a little lower at 2/94 per lb., and certain share quotations were easier, especially in cases where prices had been put up recently. Angle Java were lower at 7/6, but Bart Tigs were harder at 88/9, and Dissings advanced to 25/5 bid. East Java weakened to 55/-, and Java kenkened to 55/-, and Java
